SQL

SQL is a standard language for storing, manipulating and retrieving data in relational databases. It was developed by IBM in 1974 and is now one of the most popular database languages in the world. SQL is used to create and manage databases, to insert, update and delete data, and to retrieve data from the database.

Info & Web Techonology

Information technology (IT) is the use of computers and telecommunications equipment, networks and software to store, retrieve, transmit and manipulate data in a digital form. It is a broad term that encompasses a wide range of technologies, including hardware, software, networks, and services. IT is used in a variety of applications, from business operations to entertainment and education.

Data Visualization

Data visualization is the process of representing data in a graphical or pictorial format. It is a way of communicating information about data, making it easier to understand and interpret. Data visualization can be used to identify trends, patterns and outliers in data, and to present complex information in a clear and concise manner.

ELC

ELC is a type of data visualization that uses a grid of colored squares to represent data. Each square represents a data point, and the color of the square indicates the value of the data point. ELC is often used to visualize large datasets, such as those generated by machine learning algorithms. It is a simple and effective way to communicate complex information, and it is easy to interpret.
